GREYHAWK Selected for Burlington County Landfill Gas Recovery Project

New Jersey—February 22, 2007— Greyhawk announced today that the firm has been tapped by the Burlington County Resource Conservation Department for construction management of a 7.2 MW power plant using landfill gas recovered from the Burlington County Landfill in Columbus, NJ. Project scope includes installation of landfill gas fueled generator sets, fuel treatment equipment, transformers and switchgear, along with construction of the 6700 square foot generator/engine enclosure, parking lot and other site development work, and installation of power transmission and on-site distribution cabling.

This project benefits the environment by reducing production of greenhouse gases and allows the owner to recover energy from collected landfill gas which would otherwise be flared. The owner will use the generated electricity to power on-site facilities and will sell the excess power (approximately 6 MW) to the local electric utility company. This project is on a "fast track," with construction scheduled to begin in March 2007, initial power to be generated in August 2007 and project completion by October 2007.

Greyhawk team members include Chuck Romanoli, Rob Notley and subconsultant SIGMA Energy of Melville, NY. Greyhawk will be serving as the Owners Representatives for the Burlington County Board of Chosen Freeholders. DCO Energy is the Contractor responsible for designing, constructing and operating the facility. The services provided by the expert GREYHAWK team include review of drawings and documents, review and monitoring of project budget and schedule and full-time on-site construction management.
